

Extract N°3: Nedry shuts down the park's security system to steal the embryos...

"What the hell?" Arnold said, staring at his monitors.

"What happened?" Muldoon said. "You lose power?"

"Yeah, but only power on the perimeter. Everything in this building's working fine. But outside, in the park, the power is gone. Lights, cameras, everything." His remote video monitors had gone black.

[...]

Dennis Nedry pushed open the door marked FERTILIZATION. With the perimeter power out, all the security-card locks were disarmed. Every door in this building opened with a touch.

He entered the fertilization room. The lab was deserted; as he had anticipated, all the staff was at dinner. He pulled on a pair of heavy insulated gloves and opened the walk-in freezer marked CONTENTS VIABLE BIOLOGICAL MAINTAIN -10° MINIMUM. The freezer was the size of a small closet, with shelves from floor to ceiling.

The embryos were arranged by species: Stegosaurus, Apatosaurus, and Tyrannosaurus. Each embryo in a thin glass container. Nedry quickly took two of each (...), left the freezer and returned to the main lab.

[...]

Grinning, Dennis Nedry walked down to the ground floor, nodded to the guard, and continued downstairs to the basement. Passing the neat lines of electric Land Cruisers, he went to the Jeep parked against the wall. He climbed into it, turned the ignition key and started the Jeep.

Nedry glanced at his watch. From here, into the park, and three minutes straight to the east dock. Three minutes there back to the control room.

Piece of cake.

Abridged from Jurassic Park, Michael Crichton, 1991

Extract N°3: Nedry shuts down the park's security system to steal the embryos...

"What the hell?" Arnold said, staring at his monitors.

"What happened?" Muldoon said. "You lose power?"

"Yeah, but only power on the perimeter. Everything in this building's working fine. But outside, in the park, the power is gone. Lights, cameras, everything." His remote video monitors had gone black.

[...]

Dennis Nedry pushed open the door marked FERTILIZATION. With the perimeter power out, all the security-card locks were disarmed. Every door in this building opened with a touch.

He entered the fertilization room. The lab was deserted; as he had anticipated, all the staff was at dinner. He pulled on a pair of heavy insulated gloves and opened the walk-in freezer marked CONTENTS VIABLE BIOLOGICAL MAINTAIN -10° MINIMUM. The freezer was the size of a small closet, with shelves from floor to ceiling.

The embryos were arranged by species: Stegosaurus, Apatosaurus, and Tyrannosaurus. Each embryo in a thin glass container. Nedry quickly took two of each (...), left the freezer and returned to the main lab.

[...]

Grinning, Dennis Nedry walked down to the ground floor, nodded to the guard, and continued downstairs to the basement. Passing the neat lines of electric Land Cruisers, he went to the Jeep parked against the wall. He climbed into it, turned the ignition key and started the Jeep.

Nedry glanced at his watch. From here, into the park, and three minutes straight to the east dock. Three minutes there back to the control room.

Piece of cake.

Abridged from Jurassic Park, Michael Crichton, 1991